

HAUTE AVIATION: BASED IN GSTAAD – BOUND FOR THE

HAUTE AVIATION takes private chartering to a new level of comfort, professionalism and connectivity. The new company enters the business as a potential game changer by addressing key issues that have so far been unresolved. Its founders and partners bring many years of experience in private aviation and created HAUTE AVIATION specifically to suit the needs of Gstaad's international clientele.

For most clients flying is a matter of trust and comfort. Passengers have to feel at ease when sitting in an airplane. And they will aboard HAUTE AVIATION's brand-new Pilatus PC-12 NGX.

Safety, connectivity and flexibility through professionalism

HAUTE AVIATION is the first and only Swiss private charter company to operate a commercial PC-12 (under the AOC of ExecuJet). The decision to operate the aircraft commercially significantly ameliorates the customer experience on three levels.

A commercially operated plane must be navigated by two experienced professional pilots. This may sound obvious, but it is not. HAUTE AVIATION is the only Swiss PC-12 operator with professional pilots, who must pass an exacting selection and training, and who are put through their paces every six months.

"There are three points on which we shall never compromise when selecting and training our crew: safety, experience and hospitality for our passengers," says Alexander Tamagni, CEO and co-founder of HAUTE AVIATION.

Their Swiss AOC further makes HAUTE AVIATION the only PC-12 operator to offer domestic flights. They are the perfect service provider for clients from Gstaad who want to visit St Moritz, connect from Zurich or reach Gstaad from Geneva with no hassle.

Last but not least, a commercially operated business jet offers the highest degree of flexibility to a clientele that must often make travel decisions at short notice, be it for family or business. No need to join a club, own a plane (partially), or the like. Clients enjoy all the comfort of a private jet with a maximum of flexibility and no strings attached.

Swiss technology stationed at Gstaad Airport

HAUTE AVIATION has chosen Gstaad Airport as their home base to offer unprecedented access to a private charter in Saanen. There is no reason why Saanen should not have its own Swiss airline that reinforces Gstaad's connection with domestic, European and global destinations.

The aircraft from Swiss manufacturer Pilatus is the perfect fit for the demanding conditions in Saanen. The airport is tightly nestled in the mountains and features a relatively steep approach coupled with a short runway. The PC-12 offers a maximum of comfort and space while ensuring safe landing and take-off in Saanen.

Tamagni himself is a professional pilot and admits that he likes to fly the PC-12 NGX. "To fly in this brand-new aircraft is as much a treat for us pilots as it is for our passengers." This latest model boasts larger windows, which flood the spacious cabin with daylight and offer panoramic views. Re-designed ergonomic seats and the quietness of the PC-12 NGX's new engine invite passengers to relax.

Aside from the PC-12 NGX, ideal for flights within Switzerland and Europe, a Bombardier Global Express will join HAUTE AVIATION's fleet next spring. This matchless business jet will fly up to 13 passengers non-stop to the most faraway corners of the world.

Should HAUTE AVIATION not be able to fulfill a specific service with their own aircrafts, they offer a broker service backed by many years of experience.

Tamagni has been in private aviation for 15 years and knows the tricks of the trade: "With so many charter flight providers on the market, it can be difficult to know who to trust. Our clients take advantage of our modern aircraft and our extensive industry network to find a reputable and reliable partner. We'll assist them with every aspect of the booking, from the selection of the aircraft, catering and in-flight team to VIP transfers to and from the airport."

HAUTE AVIATION's new service caters to clients looking for a domestic flight or a reliable non-stop connection within Europe at a fair cost. Passengers fly to their destination of choice without the wait and inconveniences involved with ordinary travels. Comfort, safety and protection against the current pandemic are the top priorities of HAUTE AVIATION.
